ATLANTIC FIBERGLASS REGAINS DOMAIN NAME

(October 2, 2007, Meriden, CT) Panelist Harold Kalina of the North American Arbitration Forum issued a Uniform Dispute Resolution Procedure decision on September 27, 2007 upholding Atlantic Fiberglass Products, Inc.'s (www.atlanticfiberglass.net) right to own the "atlanticfiberglass.com" domain name (which had been hijacked). Atlantic Fiberglass manufactures architectural quality fiberglass flagpoles for residential and commercial applications.

The decision confirmed Atlantic Fiberglass' contentions that it owned the "Atlantic Fiberglass" common law trademark; that the unknown cyber squatter had no rights to the "Atlantic Fiberglass" trademark; and the domain name had been registered and was being used in bad faith. "While we would have preferred to resolve this without instituting formal proceedings, we are pleased with the Panel's decision," Houston Putnam Lowry said.
